COCCIDIALIFE CYCLE

1

Birds shed uninfected coccidia parasites in their faeces.

2

The parasites will remain in the environment for up to 12 months, becoming infective in hot, damp conditions.

3

The bird ingests the parasites from their environment.

4

Within the gut, the parasites penetrate cells and begin reproduction. Once they have reached maturity new coccidia parasites will be shed in the faeces.

With each cycle the number of parasites grows, increasing the risk of infection. Combining Coccivet with good husbandry will clear infections within 7 days.
